Choosing E&M Levels, Including Level 4, the Right Way

04/16/2026 6:00 PM Eastern

Live Virtual Webinar

Evaluation and management is the most common service type performed by healthcare providers. Precision when coding for this service type is essential. There is nothing subjective about choosing evaluation and management levels. Choosing an evaluation and management level is an objective process where the AMA CPT Editorial Panel has published precisely what is required to be performed and documented to support the submission of each evaluation and management level. There should be no ambiguity, guessing, or uncertainty associated with choosing evaluation and management levels. Those who attend this session will know exactly what needs to be performed and documented to support each evaluation and management level. No more approximating!

Learning Objectives:

1. Create a progress note that supports submission of a level 4 E&M in the office setting
2. Differentiate between a chronic condition and an acute condition using AA CPT Editorial Panel definitions
3. Describe the two pathways that may be used to choose evaluation and management levels in the office setting
